The role of women in the workplace and society was very different in 1885. In fact, it was not until 1929 that, thanks to the unwavering legal efforts of five Alberta women, the "Persons Law" was passed. Canadian women were officially accorded status as "persons" under the law and thus became eligible as appointees to the Senate.

Today, Fulton & Company LLP is proud to count four highly qualified female lawyers among their number. These four lawyers are infused with the same sense of justice, fairness and dedication that, in 1929, motivated five other courageous Canadian women to forever change the roles women would play in their own lives, in the workplace and in our society.
